Prank sends Senga aide running to cops

By William C. Swenson Jr.

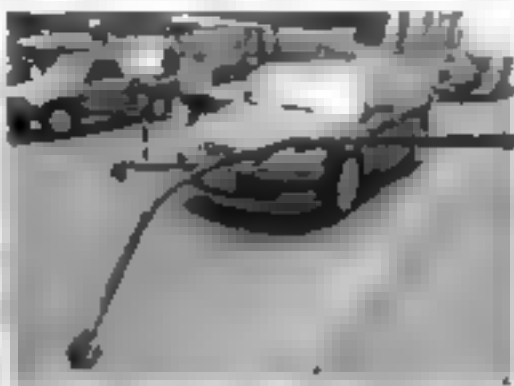

Figure 1 displays two  $^1\text{H}$  NMR spectra. The left spectrum is for poly(2-vinylpyridine) (P2VP), showing peaks for the vinyl protons (5.5-6.5 ppm), the pyridine ring protons (7.0-8.0 ppm), and the backbone protons (1.5-2.5 ppm). The right spectrum is for poly(2-vinylpyridine-co-2-vinylbenzoxazone) (P2VP-co-P2VBO), showing similar peaks for P2VP but with additional peaks for the benzoxazone ring protons (7.5-8.5 ppm) and the benzoxazone backbone protons (2.5-3.5 ppm).

1. The first step is to identify the variables in the model. In this case, the variables are the number of hours worked per week (X) and the number of hours per week that the individual is available to work (Y).

2. The second step is to determine the relationship between the variables. In this case, the relationship is that the number of hours worked per week is a function of the number of hours per week that the individual is available to work.

3. The third step is to estimate the parameters of the model. In this case, the parameters are the intercept (a) and the slope (b).

4. The fourth step is to test the model. In this case, the model is tested using the F-test and the t-test.

5. The fifth step is to interpret the results. In this case, the results show that the number of hours worked per week is significantly related to the number of hours per week that the individual is available to work.

By Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — A new exhibition at the National Museum in Manila has sparked controversy over the absence of Chinese artifacts. The exhibition, titled "The Silk Road: Trade and Culture," features a collection of fine artifacts from various civilizations, including the Roman Empire, the Byzantine Empire, and the Islamic world. However, the exhibition does not include any artifacts from China, which is a major source of goods along the Silk Road. Critics argue that the omission of Chinese artifacts is a reflection of the Chinese government's influence over the museum's collection.

Exporters seen getting hit by new Customs law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—Exporters are expected to face significant challenges under the new Customs law that will take effect in 1997. The new law, which is part of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), will require exporters to provide more detailed information to Customs about their exports. This information will be used by Customs to determine the value of the exports and to calculate the duties that are owed. The new law will also require exporters to provide more detailed information about the origin of their exports. This information will be used by Customs to determine whether the exports are eligible for preferential treatment under NAFTA. Exporters are expected to face significant challenges in complying with the new law, particularly in terms of the increased paperwork and the need to provide more detailed information. However, some exporters are already beginning to prepare for the new law by developing systems to collect and manage the required information.
